Ye brave Jol_ly Sportmen who fol_low the Chace, who rise when bright Phœ_bus first smiles in the East, ye brave Jol_ly Sportsmen who fol_low the Chace, who rise when bright Phœbus first smiles in the East,
While
health bush_ing charming_ly o_ver each face, with a glow so de_ light_ful can scarce be ex_prest, when the Game is in view at the peep of the dawn, when the Game is in view at the peep of the

The Fox is unkennel'd the Woodland he tries,
Now strains up the Hill, or now sinks in the vale,
Tho' swift as the wind cunning, Reynard he flies,
Yet his speed nor his cunning will nothing prevail,
When the Game is in view, at the rise of the dawn,
How sweet the Horn sounds o'er the dew sprinkled lawn.

(3)

'Tis Exercise gives us the blessings of life,
Health Peace and Contentment all chearful attend,
All Strangers to Faction to Envy and Strife,
And the Eve is still crown'd with a Bottle and Friend,
Then like hearty Sportsmen we rise the next dawn,
While sweet the Horn sounds o'er the dew sprinkled lawn.
